ILIMA An Orange Flower that will Bloom Forever

Patrick's beloved horse Ilima was put to rest last month on Kauai . Many of Patrick's paintings feature Ilima. She was a famous and well loved horse. Ilima, a palamino mare named after the Orange flower of Oahu, was buried under her shade tree in a pasture near Wailua Falls on Kauai . The entire pasture began to bloom of orange flowers following her death. She had a wonderful life.

Why would you wanna come to Florida from Hawaii ?

That was the question asked by just about everybody I met in Florida . In my ambition to explore the rest of my yard (Earth), I've always felt that Florida is an important place to visit on a regular basis. My first trip here confirmed those feelings.

Maui's Ritz Carlton Festival of the Arts

Maui's Festival of the Arts was held at the Ritz Carlton April 4th and 5th. It is such a privilege to be part of the sharing of Art and Hawaiian culture. I enjoyed painting with the ohana of presenters and visitors. Mahalo to Clifford Naeole and the gang at the Ritz Carlton Kapalua.

Kawena's Soccer Team Undefeated! Woot Woot!

I was so thrilled to spend the weekend with Kawena's North Hawaii Soccer team at the Kirk Bank's Tournament on Oahu . The team won all their games this season including the four games at the tournament where no points were scored against them. It was exciting to watch Kawena score the first goal of the tournament. Just a year ago they had lost all their games. Great Job Coaches! Kawena's mom Emily Pagliaro and Grandpa Sal Pagliaro were among the proud family.

Her new dog Maile stayed home with Tutu who had a broken ankle. Enjoy your healing Tutu!

THIS MONTHS FEATURED PAINTING

"Honu Kisses"

Hawaii's Green Turtle known as Honu swims into certain areas of the reef known as "Cleaning stations" to be preened by fish in a symbiotic relationship that benefits the fish, because they eat algae and small animals off the honu, and benefits the honu as it gets its shell cleaned.

Honu Kisses was largely inspired by a photograph of a sea turtle taken by Scott Hanft. www.scotthanftfinearts.com

Honu Kisses now available in Giclee and Mated Prints

Patrick Ching's Artistic Insights:

PAINTING SKIES

Most people walk through the world not noticing the subtle changes in the sky. Artists are a bit more observant than the average person. Hang around Patrick and you'll see the sky from a whole new view.

Most artist will notice that the sky is lighter down below and gets darker as you go higher. There is another difference that even most artists don't notice:

The sky is not only darker up high but also redder as well. The sky seems quite purplish as it gets higher.. (blue with red makes purple).

Here's the surprise:

The sky is not just lighter toward the horizon but greener as well. Adding a touch of certain greens to the lower sky will enhance its contrast from the upper sky. Hence, the sky will not only contrast from light to dark, but from green to red as well. Green and red are the opposites or complements of each other. The viewer won't even know Why your sky looks so good, but they will notice that it does!
