

Scholastic Art Exhibition Opens at Hawai'i State Art Museum

Join us for the grand opening of the 48th Annual Hawai'i Regional Scholastic Art Awards 2011 art exhibition in the Diamond Head Gallery of the Hawai'i State Art Museum for First Friday on February 4th from 6 to 9 p.m. The public is invited to this free event. The exhibition, which features art by local students in grades 7-12, runs through March 31. It is a tribute to the many hardworking public and private school arts teachers who volunteer each year to make this competition a reality.

The Scholastic Art & Writing Awards Program is the longest-running and most prestigious student arts recognition program in the United States. The Scholastic Awards were established in 1923 by M.R. Robinson to encourage, foster, and reward student creativity across the country. This year marks the 48th year of the Hawai'i Regional Scholastic Art Awards. Approximately 1,500 entries were received from middle and high schools statewide, including public, private, home, and charter schools. From those entries, 237 student works were chosen to be in the exhibit. This is the fourth year that HiSAM will be hosting the exhibit.

The most outstanding works receive the regional Gold Key Awards and Silver Key Awards. Of these finalists, five are nominated for the American Vision Award, the highest honor in the national competition. All Gold Key Award artworks go on to represent the Hawai'i region in the national judging held each April in New York City.

The Hawai'i State Foundation on Culture and the Arts will present the Tadashi Sato Living Art Scholarship to an outstanding Hawai'i student artist. The scholarship was established by Keiko Sato in honor of her late brother, Tadashi Sato, to be awarded to one high school senior whose work in the competition best exemplifies Sato's belief that emotional and spiritual influences flow through the artist creating "a living work of art."

Art Lunch Lecture – Fearful Symmetry: The Underwater Photography of Wayne Levin

Tuesday, February 22, 2010, 12-1 p.m., Hawai'i State Art Museum, Free

In his latest project, master photographer Wayne Levin captures remarkable images of large schools of akule, primarily in Kealakeua Bay. The mysterious patterns in Levin's images—created by hundreds and even tens of thousands of the small fish moving in unison—mirror the behavior of large flocks of birds, the swarms of bees, and herds of large mammal migrations. Why do similar patterns also occur so often in visual art, dance, and music? Why are such patterns so deeply attractive to the human mind and our sense of aesthetics? What do they tell us about the paradoxes of our humanity?

Frank Stewart has published four books of poetry, a literary history of environmental writing, and eight anthologies concerning the contemporary literature and natural history of Hawai'i, Asia. As editor of Manoa: A Pacific Journal (University of Hawai'i Press) he has also edited over forty volumes of international writing. His essays on art and books have been widely published. He is the 2002 recipient of the Hawai'i Award for Literature.
